

A farmer forks a cascade of Pangola through the air.

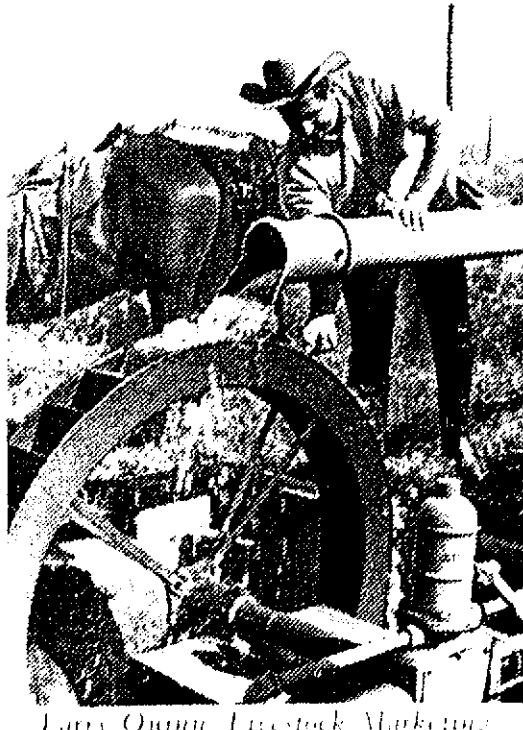

Pangola grass, originally from South Africa and developed by U. S. agricultural agronomy expert Howard W. Beam at Taiwan, was introduced several years ago to Central Brazil's "campesinato" region of Sao Paulo and Minas Gerais Provinces. Under supervision of foreign and technicians working for the Alliance For Progress, 400,000 acres of dry and barren land were planted. When the grass, the Taiwan A-24 variety, grew, it repulsed not only parasites but area disease which destroyed the more common Bahian strain. It also provided a year-round grazing area and created a crop for baling as winter fodder in colder climates of the country.

Cattle, normally marketable after four years of regular grazing on Bahian grass, grew and developed to full market size in 24 to 30 months on Pangola grass. This increase in beef production was further enhanced by an additional 100 pounds in weight per animal.

For Brazil, where food production lags behind population growth, expected to double within 25 years, Pangola grass may mean the difference between life and death on a national scale. Plantings of some 200,000 additional acres have been completed, with more to come, spreading the green grass to wherever it can be of service.

Area residents and farmers discuss problems at a special class in Mato, Brazil's agricultural research center.

Larry Quinn, Livestock Marketing Specialist from Honolulu, studies a water delivery system of one farm.

Farmers work to bale the Pangola grass for feed.

The destructive tick, a major pest, is repulsed by Pangola grass.

Pangola grass grows in Mato, Brazil.

Later, and more quickly developed to full market size are the cattle in Mato, Brazil.

Youth Beat

THE NATIONAL REPORT ON WHAT'S HAPPENING

Oops Youthbeat, along with many other commentators, got caught by one of those misunderstandings that occasionally add some static to our communications. We commented last month on the furor caused by reported advice from the National Council of Churches on drinking by young people. Both UPI and AP carried stories reporting council endorsement but later corrected them to say the council is only giving study to a report which urges lowering the drinking age and letting teens drink at family and church functions. We're happy to set the record straight here.

Taxation Without Representation: History repeats itself. New huge teen problem: Thousands of teens making over $500 a year and paying income taxes. Archaic laws say "21 is voting age" (except in Georgia and Kentucky—18, Alaska—19, Hawaii—20). Still teens are hit by federal and state taxes. This coupled with draft and enlistment age standards makes teens wonder about the unfairness of it all.

Boston had a tea party. It's hardly that in Vietnam. Recent poll shows that 70 per cent of all teen respondents believe voting age should be 18. Ninety per cent believe "if you are old enough to fight, you are old enough to vote." Next on the question list: "If you are astute and industrious enough to pay income tax, shouldn't you have the right to vote regardless of your age?"

Our guess: Teens will say yes, yes, yes to a 95-5 ratio.

Some mad malcontents fault U.S. on every little thing nowadays. These trust-busters should check things out more closely in the U.S.S.R. Seems they cut down on youthful "holiganism" in the streets recently. Just shipped off all the Red rowdies to work camps en masse. Not quite what our nitpickers consider righteous.

Troubled Zoo: Meanwhile in Monkee-land disturbing chatter has appeared. Sales of Monkee fan magazines and merchandising material dropping at an alarming rate. One publisher of Monkee Spectrals, called emergency meeting of his board of directors to figure out ways out, out of tons of pulp in warehouses and on newsstands. The Monkees remain very big on a recent network survey of boys and girls aged 13-19. However, survey was made over three months ago and lots of teens have turned to other favorites. Show still big but the peak has passed. Monkees should hurry along their movies for payoff on their acting talent. They never were musicians. Meanwhile, does anyone remember James Bond?

Beatles Bomb Out Again: They were recording of "I Am a Walrus" should be called: Here Comes the Hippie pot-o-mess in India. Despite their pleas of "meditation for drugs" the Walrus broke carries out the "Blow Your Mind" mess age Once greatest etc.

Hippie-erlie Loophole: Latest dodge of psychedelic radio stations is to provide their own interpretation of the "social significance" of message music. This fraudulent little maneuver supposedly gets station off the hook with Radio Code Authority and the FCC. Won't work. By now "Blow Your Mind" sell is a hippie hang up. This strange segment of the music world believes its social mission is philosophical and psychological disorientation instead of therapeutic soundness. Teens can recognize a put on ad when they're put upon by merchants of menace such as irresponsible music makers and music players. "Clean" stations should join the fight to clean up "air pollution."

Recent Study: Teen girls aged 13-19 made 82,640,000 pieces of clothing last year. Research problem: Survey questionnaire was sent to consumer panel of a fashion magazine for the young. The projected figures across a total teen audience of 10 million girls claim: 80 per cent know how to sew. A staggering 60 per cent a true figure is 75 per cent.

Skin Game: Always a shocker to note some gorgeous teen and young 20s gal models and stars who have less than perfect skin. Seems a shame to name them, cause make up and retouching covers a multitude of sins. Next surprise is how many have flawless faces and wear little make up even before the Big Eye. Such like are Twiggy, a creamy, and English Suzanne Pleshette, peaches and cream, discovery Cheryl Tiegs, Petula Clark, bonny British coloring.

Little Shavers: Move over guys. Latest survey shows one out of every three women aged 18 through 24 now uses shaving cream? Why not? Gals say it's refreshing and who are we to argue?

Television and Radio

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

AP Television-Radio Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Martin Balsam, ever since the golden days of live television drama, has been a frequent guest in the nation's living rooms. He has played everything from villains to heroes, and it is with a certain wistfulness that he confesses that, while the public constantly recognizes his face, usually they don't know his name.

"Or," said Balsam, sadly, "They call me Ernie—it seems I bear a certain resemblance to Ernest Borgnine."

But Balsam, an Actors Studio graduate, has in fact been making a theatrical name for himself in the past couple of years. He won an Oscar for his performance in the film, "A Thousand Clowns." Currently he has star billing in the Broadway hit, "You Know I Can't Hear You When the Water's Running."

On Sunday evening he will share the limelight with Maureen Stapleton in one of the current television season's highlights—Truman Capote's play, "Along the Paths of Eden."

Balsam thinks the hour special on ABC will be as effective as Capote's "Christmas Memory" last season—which, incidentally, ABC will rerun next Tuesday night.

The actor, a professional for more than two decades, looks back fondly on the old days of live drama. Later he followed the industry west when it went into filmed series and appeared in guest star roles in everything from Alfred Hitchcock shows to "Dr. Kildare." He made a couple of pilots for series that did not sell, but always banked to get back on the stage.

The Capote assignment, to be taped in New York during hours when he was not needed at the theater, came to him, he said, at just the right moment.

"The Broadway shows was set, and I was just beginning to get a little restless. Working on the other project took up all the slack."

Bob Hope and company had a good time Thursday night with a freewheeling comedy hour with a way-out Christmas theme. The idea was that Santa Claus—Bob with beard—crash landed his sleigh and roinder on a freeway during rush hours and promptly was arrested. This was Scene 1 and the jokes were about traffic and drivers.

Scene 2 was the jail cell where Santa was sent and, with fellow prisoners Wally Cox and Ernest Borgnine, the jokes turned to back saws baked in cakes. Finally Santa went on trial—Jerry Colonna was the judge and Don Adams the prosecutor and the subject matter of the jokes changed too, but they kept coming just as fast as ever.

It was not one of Hope's better shows, but it was still pretty amusing.

Boy Had to Work Out Fine

WEST FARGO, N.D. (AP) — Municipal Judge Donald Crothers refused to let Lonnie Rodacker, 17, pay $50 in traffic fines. Instead, he put the youth to work weekends scrubbing the police station floor at $1 per hour for 50 hours.

Profile in Poverty

By TOM TIEDE
NEA Staff Correspondent

CHARLESTON, W. Va.—(NEA)—There is nothing so perplexing for Americans as having a bunch of poor people loitering about with their malnutrition showing.

This is especially true in West Virginia.

Folks here are hearty, fundamental stock. They have cut their homes and way of life out of solid Appalachian Mountain rock. They've done well. And they believe any one, with hard work and God's help, can do the same.

Unfortunately, it doesn't work out that way.

That's why the poor are perplexed.

Most people in West Virginia want to work hard. Most people want God's help. But in Mingo County the unemployment rate is 20 per cent. In Lincoln County the infant mortality rate is three times the national average. In McDowell County, $3 million in welfare funds is distributed annually.

Incredible privation exists in some areas. Children without soap are dyed black from coal dust. Whole communities are without sanitation facilities. Clothes are too often a luxury for some. Beans and oatmeal are too often common diets.

To the ordinary, well-fed West Virginian, the confusion of these conditions is multiplied by the sheer scope of them. A Sunday drive into the back hills is like entering another world. The poor themselves are like foreigners.

"I've lived in this state all my life," says an automobile salesman. "Yet some of the people I see still amaze me. I just can't believe they exist."

Many people, in fact, don't believe it. State poverty worker Jefferson Monroe candidly feels that thousands of West Virginians are so habituated to poverty conditions that they no longer look, and they no longer see.

Says Monroe: "It's kind of a social cataract."

Monroe, 37, is the widely controversial state director of the Office of Economic Opportunity. As such, he should be a political fence-straddler. He isn't.

"I don't like the phoniness that we've pulled off in this state," he says bluntly. "We go around praising our beautiful lakes and our beautiful mountains. Well, they are beautiful, but... we've got a lot of ugly poverty areas here too."

"I don't think that we're really interested in realizing this. Even the church isn't. The poor are in the way. They're bothersome. If the church could, it would get rid of the poor by machine-gunning them on the front lawn."

"We've got to start looking at the poor as people. We can't be phony or impersonal. We've got to accept them and their ideas if we're ever going to do any good in this state."

Monroe and his OEO are variously thought of in West Virginia. Many feel he is an overaged militant with sophisticated, unworkable promotions. Others think he's a breath of fresh wind in the otherwise stagnant air of poverty programming.

Monroe himself is aware of the controversy.

"My mission," he says, "may be suicidal."

The mission, as Monroe tells it, is unique in existing poverty administration. He says his credo is "people," not "paternalism."

Monroe dislikes programs, feels welfare money is largely outdated, and is discouraged with ivory-tower imagination. Instead, he has outlined for West Virginia an organizational plan of getting the poor to decide their own fate.

"Poverty administrators," he says, "shouldn't work for the poor. We should work with the poor. And we can only do that by getting down and rubbing elbows."

Monroe's doctrine, briefly, is one of grass roots participation. Monroe believes in organizing the poor to lobby for themselves. He believes progress can be made by working from the bottom up, rather than from the top down.

"We have to motivate the poor. Nobody has ever tried that before. I don't think anybody else is trying it now. We have to get them to pitch in and help. We have to have maximum feasible participation from them."

"We must establish some sort of communication between these people and their government. If we don't they will have to agree with Richard Nixon, the war on poverty would indeed be a cruel hoax on the poor."

"I think we can reduce poverty in this state only when the people themselves decide to do it. When the poor decide they are through living as they are and when they decide they want to live like everybody else."

This idea, of course, is repugnant to many, especially politicians who shiver at the thought of hordes of organized poor pounding on their doors. Thus, Monroe's doctrine has gotten only lukewarm response throughout the state.

"I've got 46 community directors throughout West Virginia," he says. "I've tried to convince all of them. So far I think maybe six agree with me."

Frankly, Monroe may have to work fast if he's to convince the others. He's an appointee of Democratic Gov. Hewitt Smith, who is likewise in controversial hot water. Smith's term ends in 1969. His reelection is in doubt.

If Smith goes, so may Monroe. And if Monroe goes, so may his ideas of organizing the poor into political usefulness. And some say that if that idea goes, the state may once again revert to paternalism and thus to poverty promulgation.

And what about the poor people then?

Indeed, the poor people. They're so perplexed.

MY PASSION, THE CAR

Dear Helen: I am a car and bike nut. I'm also a girl of 18, I love speed, hot engines, motorcycles, the big ones, I long to get behind the wheel of a Cobra or Vette and really tear up the place. I would rather look at cars than boys, though I like boys too. But if I had a choice HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Just as aircraft manufacturers farm out the construction of parts, television now has its subcontractors. One of the busiest is a former mess hall boss who builds bits of variety shows and will gross this year about $3 million.

John Urle photographs rock 'n' roll groups performing in unlikely settings — seashores, jungles, stairways, rooftops — and combines their gyrations with equally wild visual effects like dancing lights and floating flowers.

The results—which he calls "minifilms" or "songs to see"—are blended into the studio-audience shows of the Smothers Brothers, Jonathan Winters and other stars.

The advantage, says Urle, is "getting the show off the stage and giving it space, feeling, dimension and form."

Urle, 38, operates in an old building cluttered with props, 50 employees and signs like "Is there television after death?" and "Please, let's not cloud this discussion with logic."

At the rear is a sound stage where actors do scenes extolling beer, cigarettes, automobiles, cereal, diet drinks, cameras and many other products. Commercials are still a vital part of his business.

"The music groups came to me because they liked my commercials," Urle said.

When the Turtles fell over each other while running downhill and singing "She's My Girl," Urle exclaimed: "Completely unrehearsed!"

Magnified teeth and eyes of a shaggy English group called the Hollies drifted by an "Dear Eloise," Boyce & Hart sped through night traffic on motorcycles whose headlights refracted brilliant X's on "Out and About." Performers mouth the words to voice and instrumental tracks previously recorded.

Urle's minifilms of the Jimmy Joyce Singers can be seen Dec. 24 with the Smothers Brothers; the Strawberry Alarm Clock with Jonathan Winters Jan. 4 and the Turtles on Dick Clark's American Bandstand Jan. 6.

WARMING UP for his Treasure Isle chores on ABC-TV, John Bartholomew Tucker is far from being a typical daytime TV host.

"My big line," he says wryly, "was 985-9940 is the telephone number for pledges. Don't forget the area code is 212 if you're outside the city."

In addition to saying that, I hosted a chess game. The shows ran about three hours each for five nights. On Monday, the first night, everything went wrong, but I'm going to leave out most of the horror. Anyway, I got a telephone call, and it was Marlo Lewis and he arranged an audition."

What JBT didn't know was that when Lewis telephoned, the operator would not put him through to Tucker. "We are only taking pledges, sir." After much wrangling, Lewis asked if he could talk to Tucker if he pledged $25.

That worked. It's a tribute to Lewis that he is not planning to deduct the money from Tucker's first pay check.

between going out with a duffe tella or driving a Vette, I'd pick the Vette.

My favorite sound is the revving up of a cycle. It isn't just the looks, I go crazy over the engines too.

I am also learning to sky dive. I snow ski just to feel the speed. I'm in a sports car club, and I also plan to start racing hydroplanes.

I love danger, I live by it. Something tells me I am not going to live very long. I look at cars the way men look at women. So far, I'm completely in love with a blue-green Vette in the college parking lot, and I don't even know who owns it!

I've had this thing about speed and motors for five years now. Am I normal? — CRAZY FOR CARS

Dear C for C: Well, like they say everybody has to have his things: hot motors or welding old metal together for junkyard art. When you're hooked on a big interest, you're really living, and that's the important part.

... But see to it you keep on living. Speed kills, remember? — H

Dear Helen: I don't have any real troubles, but I want your opinion. Do you think the world looks down on redheads? That is, natural-type redheads, with freckles and all the accessories. — RED

Dear Red: ... Only if you're shorter than the rest of the world. Most people envy you, Red. — H

Dear Helen: When my mother left my father, I went with her, but I couldn't adjust. I came back to live with my father, thinking he had changed. He had, from bad to worse!

I can't go out or see boys. He cut off my allowance, and I have to do all the work.

I am afraid to go back to my mother because she will think I am just a mixed-up kid who mumps form person to person whenever she pleases. What shall I do? — UNDECIDED

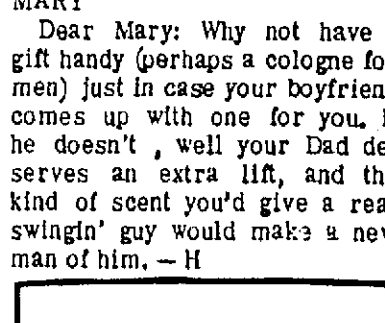

Dear Un: Perhaps you ARE a mixed-up kid, and that's the very reason why you should be with your mother. Tell her you need her, and when you move back, make a much bigger effort to adjust. Remember, she's got it rough too! — H

Dear Helen: It's not long until Christmas and I don't know what to do about a gift for my boyfriend. We date almost every weekend, but aren't serious yet. I'd hate to embarrass him with a gift if he isn't getting one for me. But I'd feel awful if he turned up with a present and I had none for him. He's a real swingin' guy. I want to be right.

How does a girl get a second-sense about these things? — MARY

Dear Mary: Why not have a gift handy (perhaps a cologne for men) just in case your boyfriend comes up with one for you. If he doesn't, well your Dad deserves an extra lift, and the kind of scent you'd give a real swingin' guy would make a new man of him. — H

By PHIL PASTORET

Our desk mate smokes a pipe and we devoutly hope that some of these times he'll try tobacco

Question of the week: Why did you pack the glass argument? UNDER the Christmas tree stand after the holiday in town?

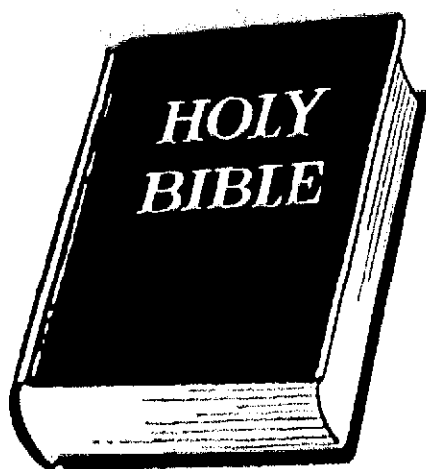

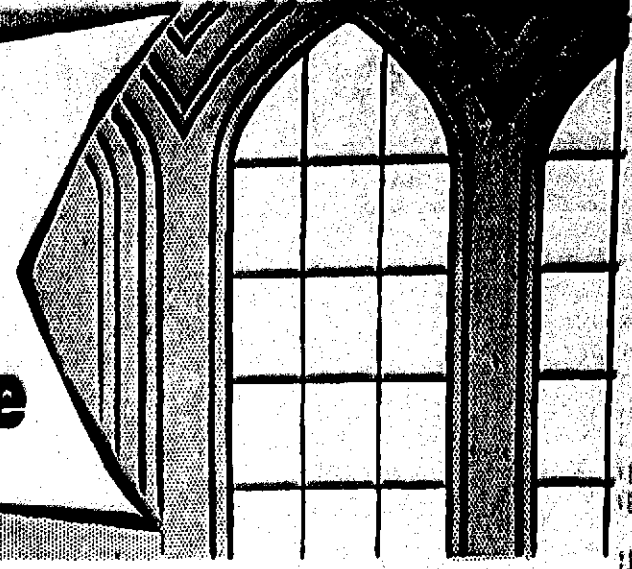

SUNDAY-MONDAY-TUESDAY AT SAENGER

The glowing warmth and hospitality with which Debbie Reynolds and Dick Van Dyke greet guests, in this scene from "Divorce American Style," happily belies the fact that they have been squabbling bitterly just before they opened the door, and that they will resume as soon as their house-party ends.

THE MAIN LINE

Here are two tracks, — two roads, — two ways to go. From this point, apparently, both lines lead to coveted destinations. True, they point in different directions and their terminals are drastically different. The Great Teacher once warned, "There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the ends thereof are the ways of death." Brother, you can't reach Heaven going in opposite directions. You've got to get on the main line and keep on going if you expect to enter by the narrow gate. We can move to the right or to the left — to life eternal or to certain death... which way will ye take? Your church offers valuable help in determining the main line. For he said, "The path of the just is as a drawing light that shineth more and more into the perfect day."

HELPING TO SPEED Christmas mail to its destination is this conveyor belt with a "brain" at the new Air Mail Facility at San Francisco's International Airport. Both incoming and outgoing mail drops down chutes and is carried by belt to a control panel (left). Operator reads bag's destination, punches button which "writes" its destination electronically on the belt. When the bag reaches the proper switch-off point, an electronic device reads the code on the belt and triggers a blade (right) to sweep the mail in a different direction. Belt's message is automatically erased. Bags can be sent to any of 20 destinations in or out of the building without any hand labor. Similar but smaller systems, developed by Goodyear, are in use in Memphis, Tenn., and New York City post offices. The belt also serves commercial firms in sorting and dispatching of packaged items.

Tobias Stone of New York and Ivan Erdos of Los Angeles won the rubber bridge championship in 1966. The untimely death of Ivan this fall caused Stone to defend with Philip Feldesman of New York. They reached the quarter finals where they ran up against the eventual winners.

Stone's jump to four spades in one of the qualifying matches was typical rubber bridge technique. It would also have been effective in tournament play since it shut East and West out of a cheap save at five clubs which would only be set two tricks on perfect defense.

West opened the seven of hearts. Dummy played low and East's ten lost to Stone's king. At this point most rubber bridge players would have conceded a club and two hearts and taken game and rubber.

Stone saw a remote chance for an overtrick and since that 30 points might decide the match, Stone went after it.

He played a diamond to dummy's ace and ruffed a diamond. A low spade to the eight put him back in dummy again. He ruffed another diamond and stopped for a moment to lay down his ace of clubs. East dropped the ten and was left with king-queen deuce of the suit.

South led another trump to dummy. East, who had discarded a heart on the first trump lead, let his deuce of clubs go. Stone led and ruffed dummy's last diamond and played out his seven of clubs.
East had to win the trick with the queen and no matter what he led at this point. Stony had an overtrick at his four spade contract.

Not too important in rubber bridge and it turned out to make no difference in that match, but if East had been really alert he would have managed to hang on to that deuce of clubs so that West would have been able to gain the lead and play a heart through dummy.

YOUR DENTAL HEALTH

Allergy Sufferer? Use Aspirin Cautiously

By WILLIAM LAWRENCE, D.D.S.

Some 27 million pounds of aspirin are consumed every year, an amount sufficient to treat over 17 billion headaches, and more than a few toothaches. It's more widely used than any other pain killer because it's cheap and available, and there's little fear of addiction or side reactions. Yet aspirin is the most common drug in use which causes severe allergic reactions.

It's a lot easier to swallow aspirin than it is to swallow a couple of aspirin, and a lot less expensive, than to see your dentist. Besides there's always hope that both the pain and the dentist will disappear permanently.

But while aspirin is generally safe to use, for those who have a history of allergy, i.e.
sensitivity to drugs, food, animals, plants, dust, etc., it can have striking and distressing, and sometimes dangerous, effects: swelling and itching involving face, tongue, lips, palate, eyelids and mucous membrane in the mouth and other parts of the body.

In asthmatic sufferers it can produce a sudden attack.
And swelling of the tongue and larynx can cause an alarming feeling of choking—not being able to swallow or breathe.

Epinephrine is the accepted remedy for relief of these symptoms, but the best remedy is prevention. If you have a history of allergy, make this known to your dentist so that

The family consists of a man in a dark t-shirt and shorts, a woman in a striped shirt and shorts, and a small child in a dark shirt and shorts. The man in the suit is holding a small object in his hand. The family is looking at him with interest. The background is a simple line drawing of a forest. Hope Girls Go Into Semifinals

BY RALPH ROUNTON
Star Sports Editor

Showing their stuff throughout a hectic second half, the Hope Lady Cats marched into the semifinals of the Ouachita Baptist University Tigerette Invitational with a come-from-behind 52-45 victory over the Woodlawn Bearettes last night at Arkadelphia. This loss knocked Woodlawn from the ranks of the unbeaten, ending the Bearettes' winning streak at nine. It was the fourth consecutive win for the Lady Cats, now 7-3 overall. This morning the Lady Cats travel back to Arkadelphia to take on the Stephens-Ouachita winner at 10:45 a.m. Ouachita and Stephens played the final game last evening, thusly their result is not known.

However, the Lady Cats should be fresher than their opponent, after hurrying back to Hope following the Woodlawn game to get some rest. Should the Lady Cats lose this morning, they will play in the consolation game at 6 p.m. If Hope wins, it will mean a berth in the finals at 8:30. Probably against Bradley. Between the consolation and the finals at the OBU Tigerettes play an important game with Memphis State University at 7:15 p.m.

Back to last night, though, which was a real test in the comeback which the Lady Cats were forced to put on. Jumping to 10-4 and 12-6 leads in the early going, Hope appeared invincible. As the half progressed, however, the Woodlawn defense cracked down hard, and some fantastic shots which somehow seemed to go in put the Bearettes ahead 24-22 at halftime.

There is hardly any doubt what Coach Charlotte Gibson had to do at the half break: she had to fire up her team. And, by golly, she did the job a couple of times over. Leading the revolution was Carol Anthony who, after getting only three free shots in the opening two periods, exploded for 20 points in the final two. But most likely the big factor which turned the tide over the way was the improved guard play by Hope in the second half.

Those six girls who played the entire game for the Lady Cats, forwards Carol Anthony, Kathryn Coleman, and Gail Hartsfield, and guards Donna Byers, Kay Coleman, and Nellie Churchwell; each changed the momentum of the game in the third quarter. From the two-point deficit the Lady Cats immediately took command, and had virtually no problems in easing on to the seven-point win, which was actually a deflation of a 52-41 cushion built to sit on during the last minute.

Hitting one point above her 21.7 ppg average, Carol Anthony led the Ladies with 23 points. Gail Hartsfield, who took up the slack when the rest were cold, sacked 15, and Kathryn Coleman, who swished a 35-foot set shot just after the buzzer, banked 14 points while playing with a bad cold. Enough can't be said of the guards, who proved once again that they are as good as the best. Katy Whitehead easily paced Woodlawn with 29 points, followed closest by Susan Boyd and Annette Johnson, with 8 and 6, respectively.

KXAR will broadcast both of today's Lady Cat games, including the semifinal one at 10:30 and the consolation or final, whichever one Hope qualifies for. If you want action, just follow these Lady Cats, a crowd-pleasing team that never will quit.

Bradley's View at Top

Joe Paterno's Penn State beat North Carolina State (undefeated and high in the nation's Top 10 at the time), Miami (going to the Bluebonnet Bowl), and lost to UCLA by two points. But the best team he saw this year, says Joe, was Syracuse. Moral, a la Paterno: "The East plays just as good football as any section of the country, every third or fourth year. If they would eliminate the red-shirt rule, it would be just as good every year."

The pros have changed their minds about Bob Griese, the Purdue flash at Miami. They were skeptical about his ability to throw the long pass. Now they think he's the best young quarterback of them all.

The $100,000-a-year salaried athletes aren't as numerous as you might think. Willie Mays, Mickey Mantle, maybe Don Drysdale in baseball; Will Chamberlain and Bill Russell in basketball; Johnny Unitas all alone in pro football (bonus babies like Joe Namath and Donnie Anderson don't count).

That's what makes Bill Bradley all the more unique—that he can start out above that figure, with a half-million-dollar deal for four years. He didn't have to work up to it, unlike all the superstars mentioned above.

The most awesome defensive performer in football now is David (Deacon) Jones, the cat-quack 260-pound defensive end for the Los Angeles Rams.

Shoulder-to-shoulder, though, no one has ever seen a pair like Buck Buchanan and Ernie Ladd of the Kansas City Chiefs, with a combined tonnage of 600 pounds. Not a bit of it turned to fat. Buck, who used to have the Chiefs' acclaim all to himself, doesn't mind having Ernie around. The stimulus makes him a better ball-player. Besides, they're old buddies, having played together at Grambling College one year.

the Chiefs, and what has been a good year would have been a great one. Those three plays would have reversed losses to Houston, San Diego and Oakland.

For some reason, the Green Bay Packers definitely aren't what they were a year ago. In four of their first seven games this season, they trailed at halftime. In all their others, they've had to struggle, except for a romp against Cleveland when Travis Williams, their super kick returner, got the Browns off balance and helped rack up a 35-0 first-quarter lead. Donnie Anderson, on early results, has to be considered a fizzle. He hasn't shown quickness in hitting daylight before tacklers get a head on him. All the Packers do, apparently, is win.

Don't fret about Jim Parker, one-time perennial all-pro tackle for the Baltimore Colts, being shunted into retirement just when the Colts are on the verge of cashing in their biggest season. The club's taken good care of the big guy, both on and off the field—helped set him up in business, in fact.

U.S. Olympic ski coach Bob Beattie laments that his biggest job in developing American skiers for international competition is developing a "feel for snow." That might sound strange since a lot of the kids, like Billy Kidd and the Chaffeees, Rick and Suzy, were bred in the snow country of Vermont. "It's different, though," insists Beattie. "They don't really live at the bottom of the mountain like the Europeans do. And they have to be in school till 1:30."

Between you'n'me, Indiana University alumni and students are mounting what's claimed to be the world's largest airlift of sports fans to get 1,650 followers to the Rose Bowl, including the campus band cheering section. At least 10 round-trip charter jets are projected.

1967: 'My Best Year in Pro Ball'

When I came to the New York Giants last summer, in their training camp at Fairfield, Conn., two facts were self-evident. One, they were not any match physically for the team I'd come from. I don't think anybody'll argue that one.

Two, I missed my old teammates acutely at the beginning. I didn't know what to expect. I had to learn a new team, a new set of receivers. I was almost like a rookie all over again, in my seventh year as a professional.

We've come to the finishing line of the 1967 season, and I'll restate the case. The Giants have come along faster and better than anyone thought they could. They grew; they progressed. For myself, it was the best year I've had in pro ball. Not counting the last game, I had 25 touchdown passes, three more than any previous season, and my passing yardage was more than 200 ahead of anything I had in Minnesota.

Nothing came easy for us because we weren't physically superior to any of the teams we met. We had no great kickers, and our special teams weren't very good, which may be an understatement. But in the middle of the season, we had surprised everybody by being tied for first place in our division.

Playing in New York, I found, produced added pressure. You're exposed to more people. You have less privacy. When you go to a restaurant even in Westchester County where I lived, people recognize you. They want to know, "What happened?"

I didn't get that in Minnesota. It's a change in New York playing, from anywhere else. I had to learn to stay away from all sorts of functions, or my time wouldn't have been my own. Why, people even knocked at the front door for autographs, which, I must admit, bugged me a little.

On the playing field, there was a high spot and a low spot. To me, the catalyst that made us a respectable team was the Pittsburgh game, our fifth of the season. Shortly before the half, I jumped off with a hip bruise. But in the last

Like I said, I'm positive

NFL: BALTIMORE AT LOS ANGELES

This could make the NFL title game an anticlimax. It's already billed as the big game of the year. On performance and record they're the best two teams in the NFL. The Rams think they have an edge being on home grounds. A win automatically gives them division title, although they'll be tied in standings, because their first meeting was a deadlock and the Rams would have more points in the two games. Which is the way they're settling things this year. Rams' favored by dramatic finish against Packers, rely on nonstop defense. Colts, have underrated defense that's just as good. They want to be the first team in history to go through 14 game schedule unbeaten. And they have Unitas.

BALTIMORE 17, LOS ANGELES 16

AFL: NEW YORK AT OAKLAND

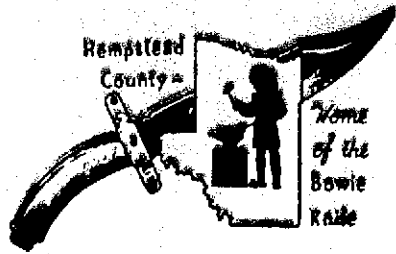

The stumbling Jets need this one badly, after two straight losses. They're only team to beat Raiders on regular season play, but that was done when they had a healthy backfield. Joe Namath has had trouble keeping pass rushers off his back. Raiders could rest complacent with division title clinched. But they're supposed to be pros.

Dear Santa...

Thirty prospective Santa Clauses in New York City have just concluded a training course in which the primary lessons were:

Watch your whiskers. Avoid garlic and onions. Don't argue.

All of this is practical advice and probably sound. For the benefit of parents with small-ty children, however, we would add a few additional rules:

Don't contract for toys that have to be "assembled" on Christmas Eve; many Pops don't even own a screwdriver. Go easy on those hearty "Ho, Ho, Ho's"; they seldom sound genuine, even to kids. Don't promise too much even if, doggonit, you have to argue.

Thus endeth the lesson. Asheville (N.C.) Citizen

The Cost of Dying

Funeral homes regularly advertise their services, but those that belong to the National Funeral Directors Association are prohibited by the association's rules from advertising their prices. Whatever the motive, the result of this practice is to limit price competition among member firms, which conduct about three-fourths of all funerals in the United States, and so to keep the cost of funerals artificially high.

In the absence of extenuating circumstances, this is almost a classic example of a conspiracy in restraint of trade, as defined in the anti-trust laws. The Justice Department has asked a federal court in Milwaukee so to declare it. Bereaved relatives seldom have the inclination or time to "shop around" for funerals they can afford. Honest price advertising would take some of the sting out of the cost of dying. — St. Petersburg (Fla.) Times

Space Race

We imagine competition is driving them to such drastic lengths, but those department stores in Dayton and Atlanta which have added restaurants to their list of marketable wares are putting the car before the purse.

Almost everyone who shops in the sprawling emporiums already has a car to haul the pile of packages home in. What they often don't have, especially this time of year, is a place to put it. The stores' most inspired merchandising tactics would be to rent shoppers a precious parking space. That'd win them a warm place in their patrons' charge-plates. — Dallas (Tex.) Times Herald

Car Plunges Off Bridge, Driver Drowns

WARD, Ark. (AP) — Troy E. Meachley, 27, of Russell County, today when his car plunged off a bridge on Arkansas 319 west of Ward, Jackson County, and overturned in high water.

State Police said a motorist of the police ruled death due to drowning.

Thompson, M. Neblick said the car ran off the side of Fort Mill bridge, hit the embankment and continued into the water.

City Purchases Electric Auto

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The City of Los Angeles has paid about $5,000 for an experimental, electric-powered sedan that can travel 60 miles an hour.

A spokesman for the Department of Water and Power, announcing the purchase Tuesday, said the car will be tested for its potential as a smog-free vehicle. The car is a four-passenger Renault powered by 20 six-volt lead-cobalt acid batteries in the trunk and under the hood.

Long, Byrd Making Sparks Fly

By WALTER R. MEARS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democratic whip Russell B. Long, who knows which wires to cross to make sparks fly in the Senate, may have a short circuit on his hands.

With one 30-second exercise, a key Senate Democrat believes, Long has dimmed, perhaps eliminated the chance that he will one day become Democratic leader.

And the leadership ambitions of Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., now No. 3 in the Senate's Democratic hierarchy, suffered in the same process.

Long and Byrd engineered passage of a bill, the Social Security increase, when only a handful of senators were on hand Thursday morning.

Byrd made the routine motion which normally renders passage final. But nothing is really final in the Senate, so the whole process was swiftly undone, to be done over again today.

A bloc of Senate Democrats oppose restrictions on federal welfare and written into the Social Security bill, and they wanted to talk about the subject.

They assumed that, in the club-like custom of the Senate, they would be protected by Democratic leaders—that is, that there would be no vote until they had their say.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield was on the telephone in his office when Long seized the leadership reins and, as the man in charge of the Social Security bill, moved for its approval.

Long's is a dual role for, in addition to being Mansfield's deputy, he is chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

It wasn't the first time Mansfield had seen his deputy try to take charge. In an earlier disagreement over a tax bill, Mansfield declared the issue to be a vote of confidence in his leadership, he won.

This time he angrily remarked that a leader is entitled to some consideration when he must leave the floor, and add: "There is such a thing as decorum and dignity in this body."

But an interrupted Long left town for Louisiana defending his tactics.

"The way to break a filibuster is to vote when you have a chance to vote," Long said.

"I thought I was dealing with men," snapped Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., who said he had an understanding with Long that there would be no vote until he had spoken on the bill.

Byrd stepped in at this point and said he resented Kennedy's words, denied there was any deception, and added he had repeatedly delayed Senate roll calls to suit the New Yorker's convenience.

Red Wagons Replace Chairs

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Children in the pediatric unit at Raleigh-Wake Memorial Hospital ride red wagons instead of stretchers or wheel chairs. The change is part of the pediatric unit's "new look" that includes brightly colored murals of fairy tale figures and circus clowns on what were gray hospital walls.

Two Sentenced at Lewisville for Burglary

LEWISVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Jimmy Earl Pilgreen, 24, and James Henry Scott, 18, both of Texarkana, were sentenced to two three-year sentences each Thursday in Lafayette County Circuit Court in connection with the Sept. 19 burglary of the First National Bank at Lewisville.

Both were sentenced to three years for burglary and three years for grand larceny. The sentences are to run concurrently and are to begin at the expiration of the five-year terms the two now are serving for burglaries in Miller County.

Authorities said $700 was taken in the Sept. 19 burglary. Pilgreen's brother, Bobby Jewell Pilgreen, 22, also of Texarkana, received three-year suspended sentences on charges of being an accessory to burglary and grand larceny.

Injuries Fatal to Arkansan

NEVADA, Mo. (AP) — Richard Fatt, 46, former mayor of Mountain Home, Ark., died Thursday in a hospital here of injuries received earlier in the day in a two-car automobile collision.

Police said a car driven by Fatt's wife, Betty, 46, hit an icy spot on U.S. 71 near here and slid into another car driven by Harry White, 35, of Webb City, Mo.

Miss. Fatt was reported in satisfactory condition in a Nevada hospital.

White and three occupants of his car were hospitalized at Nevada of undetermined injuries.

Fatt was mayor of Mountain Home from 1951 until December 1964. He owned and operated an office machine supply company at Mountain Home.

Students Ill, Langston School Closes

HOT SPRING, (AP) — The illness of more than 300 of Langston High School's 165 students and several teachers forced administration officials to close the school Thursday.

The mass absenteeism is believed to have been caused by "intestinal flu" in the school, which has reported large absenteeism because of illness.

Dr. J. Harvey Withall, superintendent of Hot Springs schools, said Langston was closed Thursday morning and would remain closed until Monday.

A basketball game between Langston and Washington High School of Texarkana was cancelled because of the apparent epidemic.

Would Settle Asphalt Price Fixing Suit

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — U.S. District Judge Gordon E. Young recommended Thursday, that the state settle its asphalt price-fixing lawsuits out of court.

Young said the cases would be "very expensive" to the state and the cost of bringing the lawsuits to court would be "horrendous." He made the remark after a five-hour hearing in which he granted both sides in the lawsuits permission to inspect and copy records of the other side dating back to 1956.

The Highway Commission contends in the suits that the petroleum companies conspired to rig prices and divide territories. The suits seek treble damages under the federal anti-trust laws.

One of the suits deals with outback asphalt and the other, with emulsified asphalt.

George Dewey Nelson of Little Rock has filed a third suit alleging price-fixing in the sale of asphalt to the Highway Commission. It is pending in Pulaski Chancery Court.

It was reported in September that the petroleum companies had offered to settle the cases for about $750,000 but that the commission and Atty. Gen. Joe Purcell rejected the offer.

Purcell intervened as a plaintiff in both of the state's cases.

Dumas Group Seeks New Bank

DUMAS, Ark. (AP) — The federal controller of the currency has been asked approve an application for the organization and operation of a new bank here. A group of businessmen in the Dumas area filed the application.

If approved, the facility would be called the First National Bank.

Director of Crime Group Is Jailed

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Aaron Kohn, managing director of the New Orleans Metropolitan Crime Commission was jailed Thursday on a contempt of court charge.

The action came after Kohn, appearing before the Orleans Parish Grand Jury, refused to name an informant.

Kohn was asked to "name the informant who told you Eugene Norman is presently conducting gambling operations in New Orleans." When Kohn declined to answer Criminal Dist. Court Judge Matthew Brantiff ordered him jailed until "such time as he is ready to answer the grand jury demand."

Judge Brantiff denied a request by defense attorney Milton Bremet for a stay of the sentence until today so the matter could be taken to the state Supreme Court.

Thursday's arrest marked the second time Kohn has been cited for contempt for refusing to disclose confidential informants. He was sentenced to 10 days in jail in 1957.

The court action against Kohn came after a new subpoena was issued demanding that the metropolitan crime commission hand over its confidential records on informants.

Algerian Coup Seems Crushed

ALGIERS (AP) — Algeria's socialist government claimed full control of the country today after announcing that loyal troops, in fierce fighting, crushed a coup attempt by rebels to the left of the regime.

The rebels had accused the regime of President Houari Boumedienne of "betrayal of the socialist revolution."

Observers said the defeat of the dissidents meant a step toward political stability for the potentially rich North African Arab nation and the chance it might take a more moderate stance in its relations with the West.

The government announced Friday night that rebel elements led by ousted army chief of staff, Col. Tahar Zbiri, "were blocked, surrounded and eliminated" near the towns of Blida and El Affroun, both within 35 miles of Algiers.

Fighting was described as bitter with the loyalist air force striking at rebel tank units. The dissident's attack, the government said, was "an inhumane operation which caused numerous casualties among the civilian population of the region."

The rebellion capped weeks in which Boumedienne's regime seemed headed for some kind of violent confrontation with a group led by Zbiri, a symbol for the hard-line revolutionaries who directed Algeria's seven-year guerrilla war leading to independence from France in 1962.

With the backing of at least two of Boumedienne's ministers, Zbiri's faction challenged the president's authority two months ago. Reluctant to attack Boumedienne, the rebels aimed instead at Finance Minister Ahmed Kaid, new boss of the nation's only political party, the National Liberation Front, and said his financial policies were a "betrayal of the socialist revolution."

News of the coup attempt was preceded Friday by an announcement by Boumedienne that he had ousted Zbiri. The president said, "Irresponsible elements have committed a clear act of disobedience. In consequence I have decided to directly assume command of the national popular army."

Algiers, the modern, French-built capital on the Mediterranean, remained calm but military patrols blocked the road to Blida.

Pure Meat Law Signed by President

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson signed into law today what he called a landmark bill designed to make sure that the meat the housewife puts on the dinner table is pure and untainted.

It requires meat plants operating within state borders — it is estimated there are 15,000 — to meet the same standards of wholesomeness that packers shipping across state lines have been required to observe.

The new law also carries guarantees that if states don't enforce the cleanliness standards, the federal government will.

Listening and watching from a wheelchair at the bill-signing ceremony in the White House East Room was Upton Sinclair, 85 years old. He got one of the souvenir pens Johnson used, plus a tribute from the President.

In 1906, Johnson said, Sinclair's novel "The Jungle" described conditions in meat-packing plants and roused the conscience of the country.

Turning toward Sinclair, seated a few feet away, Johnson told him: "This bill crowns the crusade you began 60 years ago."

The new law gives a state two years to develop a meat inspection program as strong as the federal government's. It offers federal help in setting up inspection systems. If the state fails to carry through, the federal system will take over and the secretary of agriculture for the first time will have power to inspect plants marketing meat only within a state.

Beginning Was Small But Christmas Seal Program Is Important

By MARY ANITA LASETER
Star Feature Writer

"These stamps do not carry any kind of mail, but any kind of mail will carry them."

Christmas Seals have been in Arkansas to raise funds to fight TB since 1907. That was the year a vivacious little woman in Delaware began what was soon to be an annual, nation-wide campaign to raise funds to fight tuberculosis. Her beginning was small — too small she soon realized if she was going to raise $300 for a hospital where TB patients could receive help and hope.

She went to Philadelphia to seek help from that city's leading newspaper. But, alas! The newspaperman she talked to could see no tie-up between Christmas greetings and one of the worst of all diseases. Discouraged, Miss Emily Bissell started to leave but stopped to see a member of the staff, Leigh Mitchell Hodges, whose writing she liked. When he asked about her errand and she had shown him the Seals and told her story, he excitedly took the sheet of Seals. Then, he dashed upstairs — two at a time — to his editor-in-chief and announced, "Here's a way to wipe out tuberculosis!"

"What do you mean?" asked the surprised editor. "Just what I said! Look at them, — just a penny apiece. You and I both know the way to fight this plague is to let everyone know it can be prevented and cured. And here's the way to do it within reach of everyone. What a slogan! STAMP OUT TUBERCULOSIS!"

The editor caught the enthusiasm, and the newspaper went into action. Pictures of the Seal were printed on every page — every day. From the daily news stories about the Christmas Seal, people learned some of the facts about TB for the first time.

The day the Seals were placed on sale in the newspaper office in Philadelphia, Mr. Hodges and his editor watched the people who came to buy. In came a ragged little newsboy. He was thin and his clothes were dirty. Stepping up to the counter, he put down a penny. Then he said, "Gimme one — me sister's got it."

The newspapermen who were watching knew then and there that the campaign would be a success. The Christmas Seal had made a ragged newsboy believe something could be done about TB — and had given him a chance to help. Other people would come to believe in the Crusade against TB and help, too.

They were right. Instead of the hoped-for $300, the first Seal campaign raised $3,000.

Campaign raised $3,000. The Branlywine Shack was saved. More important than that, a way of fighting the killer TB had been found... a way for all to share in learning and doing something about the disease.

Today, 60 years later the fight goes on. Despite improved methods of detection and treatment, TB remains the most common cause of death from infectious disease in the United States. Tuberculosis was the direct cause of 73 deaths in Arkansas during 1966. Of this number, 17 of the deaths occurred in people under 45 years of age. Now, the fight continues against TB but includes other respiratory diseases as well — chronic bronchitis, emphysema and others. Buy and Use Christmas Seals!

Guard Group Says Program Successful

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — National Guard leaders say a test program in New Jersey for stimulating Negro enlistments is a success. But a decision on extending the program nationwide awaits a survey on Negro attitudes toward military service.

"This is one program that has worked," Maj. Gen. Winston P. Wilson said of the New Jersey pilot program. Wilson is chief of the National Guard Bureau.

Maj. Gen. James F. Cantwell, head of the New Jersey Guard, reported steady progress in recruiting Negroes, and added: "We think we've gotten over the hump of educating the Negro community, gaining their confidence, convincing them this is not just a gimmick."

Two Negro Guard officers, Lt. Col. William S. Frye and Maj. Carl E. Briscoe, reported a gratifying reception from Negro youths in New Jersey during the recruiting campaign. They said they were not harried by any Black Power groups.

The Guard leaders spoke with newsmen after a day-long closed Pentagon discussion of the New Jersey program.

They said it has resulted so far in 381 enlistments — more than doubling the Negro strength in the state's Guard since the program began last August.

The pilot effort began after the President's Advisory Commission on Civil Disorders criticized the Guard for its performance in the Detroit riots and recommended recruiting more Negroes.

At the end of 1966, Guard figures show, there were 5,295 Negroes in the 418,609-man Army National Guard and 627 Negroes in the 82,455-member Air Guard. This amounted to 1.26 per cent Negroes in the Army Guard and .76 per cent in the Air Guard.

Cantwell said the pilot program in New Jersey was undertaken because of the Presidential Commission's criticism of the Guard. But he added, "We think the criticism was unjust."

Under the test program, the New Jersey Guard was permitted a five per cent "over-strength" amounting to 865 slots reserved for Negro enlistments this fiscal year ending next June 30.

This came at a time when the New Jersey already had a waiting list of more than 6,000 young men.

In effect, this gave Negroes a priority over the thousands of white young men waiting for openings. One of the big attractions for Guard enlistment is that it permits a young man to avoid a two-year draft hitch. Instead, he serves six months of active duty training and 5½ years as a part-time soldier in the Guard.

Cantwell said there's been no evidence of a white backlash from the special treatment of Negroes in the enlistment drive.

Wilson said he is reserving judgment on whether to expand the New Jersey program nationwide until he gets the results of a national survey, due about Feb. 1, being conducted by a civilian research organization under contract to the Guard Bureau.

Old Bridge Falls, 26 May Be Lost

POINT PLEASANT, W. Va. (AP) — The collapse of a suspension bridge into the Ohio River Friday took at least five lives and left 21 persons missing. An estimated 75 cars and trucks plunged 80 feet into near-freezing water.

The 40-year-old bridge, linking Ohio and West Virginia, fell during the late afternoon rush hour on U.S. 35. Commuters and Christmas shoppers had jammed the 1,750-foot span.

Holzer Hospital at Gallipolis, Ohio, four miles from Point Pleasant, received bodies of four men and one unidentified woman.

Ohio and West Virginia authorities agreed the death toll, once divers searched the river's depths, would go much higher. Officials said there was little chance of finding any more survivors amid the tangle of concrete and steel in the river.

"Anyone who comes out of the river will not be breathing," said John Epling, Gallia County, Ohio, prosecutor. He was named by Ohio Gov. James A. Rhodes to supervise operations on the Ohio side.

"There is no question that the final figure will be much higher," said West Virginia State Police Capt. J.D. Baisden.

Nine persons were hospitalized at Gallipolis and Point Pleasant.

Searchers with acetylene torches worked through the night trying to untangle vehicles and locate bodies in the wreckage where a long bridge section at the Ohio end fell onto land.

Divers resume their search at dawn.

Traffic was bumper to bumper in both directions when the bridge fell at 5:10 p.m.

The bridge superstructure and concrete floor tumbled on top of the cars and trucks as they hit the water.

West Virginia Gov. Hulett C. Smith and Gov. Rhodes pledged the resources of the two states in an investigation to determine the cause of the collapse. Both came here Friday night.

"That old bridge was bouncing up and down like it always does," sobbed Howard Boggs. His 18-year-old wife and 17-month-old daughter — both among the missing — were in the car with him when it plunged into the channel where the depth was variously estimated from 30 to 70 feet.

Auto Insurance Rate Raise Requested

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Two national automobile insurance rating organizations asked the state Insurance Department today for rate adjustments that would increase auto insurance rates an average of 4 per cent.

The National Bureau of Casualty Underwriters and the National Auto Underwriters Association filed for the rate changes. The two bureaus represent 50 per cent or more of the car insurance business in the state, a spokesman for the Insurance Department said.

He said the application had been turned over to an actuary to investigate whether the changes are merited.

The spokesman said a public hearing would be held on the request and, although no date has been set, he assumed it would be held soon. The bureaus asked that the proposed new rates go into effect Jan. 24.

The filing asks for a reduction of 10.6 per cent in comprehensive rates, but a 17.3 increase in liability rates. The bureaus seek a 2.7 per cent increase in $50 deductible collision insurance and a 4.9 increase in $100 deductible collision insurance.

The bureaus arrived at the 4 per cent increase figure by combining the effect of the revisions in liability, collision and comprehensive coverage rates. They said there had been no increase in rates charged by the bureaus' affiliated companies since January 1965.
